From Huritt Global Business School

What is Corporate Workforce Education and Training?

Our Purpose

Huritt Global Business School's Corporate Workforce Education and Training connects organizations and individuals with comprehensive programs to improve performance, increase productivity, decrease costs, and get bottom-line results. Our highly selected quality online courses are developed for the training and developing the skills and experience corporate employees need to perform their jobs better. Our Corporate Account Managers will work with your company to understand your vision and identify your needs and objectives; and recommend necessary employees training areas.

Why Online Training is good for Corporations

It's just more convenient.

Huritt Global Business School's Corporate Workforce Education and Training provides customized online training courses that focus on performance improvement and measurable results. Online courses allow busy professionals to login anywhere there is Internet access at any time. With Online learning, everyone in the department can get the needed training in the office. Having everyone out of the office at the same time isn't practical, and takes away from the necessary time allocated to day-to-day office duties. Our instructors are industry experts.

Why choose Huritt Global Business School for your corporate business training?

Huritt Global Business School has partnered with internationally recognized industry pioneers, professionals and trainers from throughout the United States. Many of the programs offered are available exclusively through our partnership with American colleges and universities. Training includes cutting-edge research from industry leaders as well as theory-based and practical application strategies.

As part of our commitment to local economic development, Huritt Global Business School provides businesses and organizations with workforce development training designed to fit their needs.

The Advantages of Online Learning for Employers

No matter what the nature of your business, having a well-trained and enthusiastic workforce is essential to your success. Keeping employees abreast of the latest software packages and business models can help your business be more successful, and the online learning model can reduce your costs while providing a great convenience for your workforce.

Lower Costs

Traditional training can be expensive, and the costs do not end with the courses. Expenses for travel, meals and even hotel rooms significantly can increase your total costs. If you choose online education instead, you can eliminate those extra expenses and focus on the value of the training itself. The difference in price can allow you to train an entire department online for the same price as just one or two workers using conventional education methods.

Employee Availability

While it is important to cross-train employees and bring the entire department up to speed, having everyone in a department out of the office at the same time isn't practical. With online learning, everyone in the department can get the needed training in the office. Then if an emergency arises, your employees are there to solve the problem and keep your business running smoothly.

Convenience

Finding time for employees to train on new software packages or business strategies can be difficult, but online courses can make things a lot easier. With an online course, employees can complete the courses they need at the office, at home or anywhere they have access to the Internet. Workers are also free to go at their own pace, repeating lessons as needed until you are sure they have mastered the subjects.

Course Selection

Online learning can provide a better selection of courses than traditional classrooms. When you choose traditional classroom learning, you are limited to the courses the instructor or the school offers at the times your employees can be available. But with online courses you can choose any training offered and have your employees complete the courses at their own pace. Huritt Global Business School has over 500 online courses created for the corporate workforce skills training and development.
